FINANCE ACT 1910 "DOMESDAY" BOOKS

MAYFIELD &

FIVEASHES

The Finance (1909-1910) Act (10 Edw. VII, c.8) provided for the levy and collection of a duty on the increment value of all land in the United Kingdom. The main object of the Act was to tax that part of the capital appreciation of real property which was attributable to the site itself, i.e. excluding that arising from crops, buildings and improvements paid for by the owners. In this way, private owners were required to surrender to the State part of the increase in the site value of their land which resulted from the expenditure of public money on communal developments such as roads or public services.

Increment value duty, as this levy was called, was based on the difference between the amount of two valuations. Section 26(1) of the Act required the Board of Inland Revenue to ascertain the site value of all land in the United Kingdom as on 30 April 1909. This value constituted the "datum line" for the purposes of increment value duty. Any subsequent sale or grant of a lease, or transfer of an interest in a piece of land, or the subsequent death of a land-owner, provided the occasion for a potential payment of increment value duty; the site value at that date had then to be determined.

Each unit of property was assigned an assessment number (sometimes also called a hereditament number) and plans based on the Ordnance Survey sheet maps were drawn up as the chief means of reference to the other records created in the course of valuation. Two sets of plans were created: the working plans used in the course of the original valuation and the record plans made after that valuation was completed. Those working plans which survive are in the custody of local record offices, to which enquiries about them should be directed.

The record sheet plans were drawn up to provide a graphic index to the field books and to facilitate the identification of the assessment numbers of individual properties and parcels of land. The standard scale used was 1:2,500, although larger scales (notably 1:1,056 and 1:1,250) were used for urban areas, and the smaller scale of 1:10,560 (six inches to a mile) for major moorland areas. The boundaries of the regional and the district valuation offices have altered since the original valuation, so discrepancies may arise between the districts depicted on the maps and the arrangement of the field books. The Act was repealed in 1920 without ever having been brought fully into effect.
